Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. ### Stray Shot From Mexico.

Special to THE HERALD.

In my last letter I told you about the great cathedral at Puebla. This is said to be the finest church in America but not the most expensive. At Mexico City the cathedral is several times as large and more than twice as expensive, having cost about fifteen millions. It stands on the site of a great Aztec temple, which was torn down by the Spaniards in 1531 and the foundation of the cathedral was made of Aztec idols. The National Museum at Mexico City contains hundreds of these idols carved from stone, representing the various deities of the Aztecs. The great sacrificial stone is here on which as many as 20,000 people were sacrificed to the gods in one day. Also the great calendar stone which represents minutely the history of the Aztec race for hundreds of years, as well as giving the divisions of the solar year, which is quite accurate. At the cathedral in this city are many works of art. The only one of the six original Madonnas is here and is valued at one million (Mex.). An offer of one-third this sum was refused years ago. This is a fine city of 125,000 people. The streets are well paved and the city has electric lights and all modern improvements. La Baranca, a canyon 2,000 feet deep, is three miles away, and this affords great water power which is utilized by the city in manufacturing electric power for all purposes. It is a delightful place to live, the mercury ranging from 60° to 80° during the entire year, although in the torrid zone. The city is nearly 6,000 feet above sea level, which makes it cool. Wheat is raised all over Mexico and I have seen them harvesting and sowing this crop in the same field at the same time. Nature has done more for Mexico than any other part of the continent, but the native labor is poor and indolent, very religious (all Catholics), and generally worthless. Farm hands get 30¢ a day and factory hands a little more, Mexican, which is equal to one-half our money. Tropical fruits are plentiful, and there is no place on earth where a living can be made with less work. I forgot to tell you about President Diaz. He is hale and hearty at 81, and bids fair to serve another term as president of the republic. I attended his New Year reception which was the greatest event of the kind I ever witnessed. All foreign ministers and attaches, in gold lace and state dress, were present to greet the aged ruler of Mexico who has governed twelve million people for over thirty years, and whose power is more autocratic than the Czar of Russia. The elections are a farce, not one man in a hundred casting a ballot. J. H. S. Guadalajara, Mexico.

Down in Oklahoma.

Elk City, Okla., Jan. 18, '09.
Spencer Cooper, Hazel Green, Ky.
Dear Sir: Will you please publish this for the benefit of my friends who may contemplate coming west, as this is

MY OKLAHOMA LIFE.

Stewart Hager is my name,
From Jackson, Ky, I came,
You will find me out west in a country of fame,
Starving to death on a government claim.
Hurrah for Mills county, the land of the free,
The home of the grasshopper, bedbug and flea,
I'll sing of its praises and tell of its fame,
While starving to death on a government claim.
My house is built of the natural sod,
The walls are erected according to hog;
The roof has no pitch, but level and plain,
And always gets wet when it happens to rain.
My clothes they are ragged, my living is rough,
My bread is corn-dodger, both solid and tough;
But still I am happy and live at my ease,
On sorghum molasses, bread and corn-cakes.
How happy I am when I tumble in bed,
A rattlesnake hisses a tune at my head,
A gay little centipede, all above fear,
Crawls over my pillow and into my ear.
How happy I am on my government claim,
I've nothing to lose and nothing to gain,
I've nothing to eat and nothing to wear,
From nothing to nothing I've harvested air.
Now all you claim holders I hope you will stay,
And chew hard tack till you're old and gray,
But for me I'll no longer remain,
And starve like a dog on a government claim.

Farewell to Mills county, farewell to the west,
I'll go back east to the one I love best,
I'll go back to Jackson and work in the store,
For since I've been here the crops won't grow any more.

Farewell to Mills county, where breezes arise,
Where the sun never sets and the flea never dies,
Where the winds never cease but always remain,
Till they blow us clear off our government claim.

With best wishes to yourself and better seven-eighths, I remain,
Yours respectfully,
Route 1. STEWART HAGER.

The Lincoln Centenary.

One hundred years ago the twelfth of this month a great man was born. There is no need to trace his history. You know it. Every child in the public schools has the wonderful story by heart, the story of a man whom circumstances could not bind, whom obstacles could not discourage, whom ridicule could not deter, whose height and breadth and depth of vision so far exceeded those about him that, impervious to all without, guided only by that within, he followed the way we know not of.

It is a question whether we of lesser vision see clearly even now, fifty years after his death, what his life has meant to the nation. We have seen enough to raise him above criticism, above censure, to place him among the heroes to which mankind is pleased to do a tardy justice. And we have, perhaps, come to realize something of the bigness of mind and heart that makes him our greatest American. The lengthening perspective gained by the passage of each year has but added to his prestige, and none can foresee his final rank.

We recognize, by applause and laurels, many forms of so-called greatness. We respect the man who achieves, whether the production be a symphony, a painting, a miraculous cure of disease, or the invention of a new battleship. The teacher who evolves a new cult has always a devoted following; the scientific investigator—the philosopher—these have been accorded their meed of praise. Let all those who attempt to be encouraged. This is wise and right, lest any good that can come to mankind be lost.

But, in the last analysis, there is but one true measure of greatness. It is the measure Christ gave us two thousand years ago—and which we in our vanity oft forget. That measure is service.

Tested by this standard the life of Abraham Lincoln stands out supreme above that of his fellows. Utterly forgetful of self, even to the disregard of his personal appearance, his mind, his heart, and his very existence were given freely without reserve to a nation which sorely needed him.—The February Delineator.

A No. 6 shell exploded in the hand of Robert Dunn, son of Col. I. M. Dunn, of Danville, blowing off three fingers. The cause of the explosion is a mystery. Odd Fellows of Owingsville have purchased a lot and will at once begin the erection of a two-story brick building, costing $5,000, to be used for lodge purposes.

The grand jury of Boyle county adjourned after finding indictments against thirty-three "blind tigers" operating in Danville. Among them was a county official.

Sparks from a passing engine set fire to a field of hemp belonging to W. H. C. Woods, near Bryant's Station, and had gained such headway before the fire was discovered that the entire crop was destroyed. Loss about $700.

Belle Ely, a dusky damsel of Mt. Sterling, and Clarence Snedaker, an ebony-hued sport of Owingsville, became involved in a difficulty at the former's home. The woman bit Snedaker's lower lip completely off. Both parties were arrested and are in jail.

Sherman Insley, of Harlan, killed an Indian giving his name as Hatfeather. He was a fugitive from Oklahoma, where he is wanted for murder. Insley was seeking to gain the reward of $1,000 and engaged in a desperate fight with the red-skin, whom he had located on Brush mountain.

Charles Routt was awakened at his home in Lexington early one morning last week by a grating noise at the door. His son, Woodford, aged 16, satisfied some one was trying to pick the lock, fired through the door. When he opened the door he found a file, a key and a trail of blood.

Owing to the absence of important witnesses for the commonwealth, the third trial of W. R. Campbell, charged with the murder of Policeman Michael Murphy, in Lexington, in 1907, was postponed until April 6, at which time the special venire of 100 jurymen from Clark county is summoned to appear.

Turner Nichols, of Marshall county, was fatally injured in an odd accident. A pole had been bent across his wagon bed to hold down the contents, and it suddenly slipped loose at one end and sprung up with great force, striking Nichols on the head. His skull was crushed, and all hopes of his recovery are abandoned.

Beach Hargis Breaks Out Again.

Jackson, Ky., Jan. 23.—Beach Hargis again broke loose yesterday in the approved Hargis style, shooting up the neighborhood and terrifying the citizens generally. However, his outbreak this time did not take place in Jackson but on the Clear Fork of Frozen creek at the home of his cousin, Harlan South.

Lewis Smith, a messenger from the South home, came hurrying to town in the afternoon to ask aid from the county authorities for the suppression of young Hargis.

Smith says that after leaving here yesterday morning for Frozen creek, Hargis procured some bad whiskey. Smith's story of what followed in substance follows: Hargis first went to the house of Obediah Roberts and, exhibiting a pistol, announced to Roberts that he was going to have whiskey. Roberts gave him some whiskey and while Hargis helped himself, made tracks for the other side of his farm.

Impressed South's Horse.

A short distance from the South home he met Harlan South on horseback. Again bringing his forty-five into view Hargis invited South to get off of his horse and let him ride. South, who is himself half Hargis, demurred to such a proceeding but, being unarmed, finally complied.

As soon as he was mounted Beach fired a few shots around the feet of his cousin by way of farewell, and set out for South's home.

His arrival there was so alarming that Mrs. South, her mother-in-law, and the children fled through the back door, and across fields to the home of Blane Short. Mr. Short was at the time out on his farm, but came to the house in a short time. Upon learning the cause of the trouble, he went over to the South home. He came to the house just at the same time that South came in.

Shot Dishes From Tables.

They found Hargis amusing himself by shooting the dishes off the dining room table. Upon trying to remonstrate with him, Hargis ordered them to clear out. South and Short took refuge upstairs, barricaded the door, and called from a window to Lewis Smith, who was passing, to hurry to town for an officer. As soon as Smith reached Jackson he swore out a warrant before the County Judge, which was placed in hands of Deputy Sheriff Gray Haddix.

No sooner was the warrant issued than Call Crawford, negro servant of young Hargis, secured a horse and set out for Frozen creek.

Sheriff Haddix declined the task of going to arrest Hargis unless another man went with him. He finally secured the co-operation of Constable Shelton Combs and they went out to try their luck. They had not reported up to a late hour Friday night.

Pulled up Lame.

Beach Hargis is at present incapacitated for further mischief by a shot in the foot inflicted while drunk and engaged in shooting promiscuously at everything in sight.

Deputy Sheriff Gray Haddix and Constable Shelton Combs went to arrest young Hargis, but when they got about half way they met two or three parties bringing Hargis in wounded. He is now at the home of his mother here in Jackson and is not seriously hurt.

When You Take Cold

One way is to pay no attention to it; at least not until it develops into pneumonia, or bronchitis, or pleurisy. Another way is to ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. If he says, "The best thing for colds," then take it. Do as he says, anyway.

When the bowels are constipated, poisonous substances are absorbed into the blood instead of being daily removed from the body as nature intended. Knowing this danger, doctors always inquire about the condition of the bowels. Ayer's Pills—Made by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.—

A Slick Guy.

One Jay Bates passed a forged Chicago draft for $45 on Cashier Patton, of the Hazel Green Bank, about ten days ago, and investigation leads to the fact that while a country raised young man of Letcher, we believe, he is a professional forger. Several of his crooked drafts and checks have come to light, and he is apt to light in the embrace of the law.

HIS CAREER ELSEWHERE.

HAZEL GREEN BANK.
Hazel Green, Ky., Jan. 20, '00.
Sheriff of Letcher county,
Whitesburg, Ky.

Dear Sir: Will you please inform us if you know a young man in your county by the name of Jay Bates? He claimed to live in Letcher county and that he was representing the Franklin-Price Co., of Iowa City, Iowa, and that he was selling perfumery and toilet articles. We want him here for passing a fraudulent bank draft.

Any information you may be able to give me concerning this gentleman, will be greatly appreciated. Very truly yours,
R. H. PATTON, Cashier.

J. Bates does not live in Letcher, but has practiced his profession of forgery and fraud in this county in the past. Has a splendid record in his line. His father lives in Magoffin county, I believe. He lives on the road. I have no idea where he is at this time.

Respectfully,
C. C. CRAWFORD, S. L. C.

Law Offices of

HOPKINS & HOPKINS,
Prestonsburg, Ky., Jan. 23.

Dr. C. H. Williams, Hazel Green. Dear Sir: I have your favor of the 21st relative to transaction with Jay Bates. Am sorry to say that this young man has an exceedingly bad reputation for forgery and like offenses.

He is indicted in the Knott Circuit Court for forging a bank check; in the Magoffin Circuit Court for similar offense, and in this county for obtaining money under false pretense, by buying from one of the Arnetts, a horse, paying for him with a check on the Bank Josephine, representing that he had funds to meet it.

It is a mistake that his father made good. Arnett followed him and after considerable trouble recovered the horse.

The young fellow has shown such a determined disposition to practice this kind of fraud that I do not believe his father would help him if he could, and about the only way to break him is to send him to the pen where he won't have a chance to carry on such business.

Business is exceedingly dull here. Middle creek coal mine shut down this week for the first time since it started, and the good people around here who voted for Mr. Taft, believing that it would make times better, have nothing to say.

Wishing you and your family a happy and prosperous New Year, I am, your friend,
F. A. HOPKINS.

C. E. Clark was here Sunday en route to his home at Cannel City. He had been attending the bedside of his father, Charley Clark, at Maytown, who has pneumonia, and he reported him as considerably better. Apropos, it is rumored that Estill Clark will be a candidate for the nomination for Representative from the Morgan-Wolfe district on the Democratic ticket. Should he be nominated the Democratic party may be assured that it will have a representative who will do honor to himself and his constituents as well.

The National C. W. B. M. will organize in the highlands of Tennessee a school similar to the one here in Hazel Green. The C. W. B. M. of Michigan has so far donated $7,000 to the cause and it is believed the organization in Tennessee will raise a like amount. Rev. H. J. Derthick has charge of the missionary work in Tennessee, and beginning February 15 he will conduct a series of missionary services in that state covering a period of about three weeks.

The many friends of Roger Bryan, senior member of Bryan, Goodwin & Hunt, Lexington, will regret to learn that he has been confined to his bed for the past ten days or two weeks and therefore unable to make his regular visit here. A gentleman by the name of Biggerstaff, one of the corps of commercial travelers for that firm, was here Tuesday in his stead.

Dr. A. C. Nickell a few days ago bought of John Childers, of Maytown, a handsome bay saddle mare, 14 1/2 hands high, seven years old, for $120. She is a picture and a pet with several tricks to her credit.

Enjoys Reading It.

Thomasville, Ga., Jan. 21.

Dear Mr. Cooper: I was pleased to receive your bill a few days ago. I had forgotten just when my subscription expired, so I enclose the $2 to pay up to October, 1910. I get THE HERALD quite regularly now, and enjoy the news of its pages. Our work is going on nicely. Weather is fine. We enjoy fresh vegetables from our garden every day. I often wonder how cold it is in Kentucky. Hope you are having a nice winter.

Give my love to Mrs. Cooper. I would like to see all my Hazel Green friends. Very respectfully,
MRS. MATTIE BISHOP,
Vashti Indian School.

Our lady readers should avail of THE HERALD offer to get a pair of Patent Tension Spring 8-inch Shears. Every subscriber who pays up arrearages and a year in advance may have a pair of these shears for only 25 cents. They retail at $1. Both new and renewal subscribers have the same privilege. Call and see them at this office.

Here is a good item for newspapers to copy and place in a conspicuous corner. It is from the Fourth Estate: "The man who subscribes for a newspaper and reads it is better qualified for citizenship than the fellow who borrows his neighbor's and steals the news it contains."

Floyd Day last week sold a tract of timber land on Frozen to W. H. Winterbottom & Son, of Grand Rapids, Mich., for a consideration of $35,000, a cash payment of $30,000 being made. The buyers will put in mills at once and begin cutting the timber.

John A. Adams, of the U. S. mail service, stationed at union depot, Lexington, was in town Monday, en route home from the bedside of his father, Rev. John Adams, at Maytown, who has been quite ill. Mr. Adams reported him as better that morning.

The Republican committee of this (the 84th) Senatorial district, composed of the counties of Owsley, Breathitt, Magoffin, Morgan and Wolfe, has called a convention to meet at West Liberty, March 5, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for senator.

Rev. W. B. Ragan a few days since wrote Rev. James M. Little that the reason he did not fill his appointment last week was on account of illness of himself and family, but said he would be here to preach the coming Sunday, God willing.

"Reciprocity," or you-tickle-me-and-I'll-tickle-you spirit, is a commodity between the newspaper publisher and the patron that can not be successfully dispensed with. The paper that booms a town and its people, ought to be boomed by its beneficiaries.

Shake in a Bottle.

Now is the time when the doctor gets busy, and the patent medicine manufacturers reap the harvest, unless great care is taken to dress warmly and keep the feet dry. This is the advice of an old eminent authority, who says that Rheumatism and Kidney trouble weather is here, and also tells what to do in case of an attack.

Get from any good prescription pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.

Just try this simple home-made mixture at the first sign of Rheumatism, or if your back aches or you feel that the kidneys are not acting just right. This is said to be a splendid kidney regulator, and almost certain remedy for all forms of Rheumatism, which is caused by uric acid in the blood, which the kidneys fail to filter out. Any one can easily prepare this at home and at small cost.

Druggists in this town and vicinity, when shown the prescription, stated that they can either supply these ingredients, or, if our readers prefer, they will compound the mixture for them.

Denny and Neal Nickell last week joined the United States army, enlisting at Jackson. They separated at Columbus, Ohio, and the latter is now located at Fort Hancock, N. J., but the first named had not been assigned at last accounts. Both are young men of fine promise, one being the son of Dr. A. C. Nickell, and the other of W. Nelson Nickell, and if they apply themselves properly they may emerge from the service as professional men of prominence.

CAMPAIGNING ON THE PLAINS

BY BUFFALO BILL
FROM "TRUE TALES OF THE PLAINS"

I HAVE been many times asked if the influence of the plains was not a bad one, and I have often heard some of the vast expanses of the west, where for hundreds of miles there was no one to see but himself, his horses, a boundless level of prairie grass, the blue sky above, with its sun by day and its stars by night. At first the question seemed strange, but I soon understood how a man who has lived all his life in daily touch with Broadway might go melancholy mad in a single day in a region where he could see and hear absolutely nothing but the wonderful panorama of nature and its voices. There was a multitude of things around him to arouse interest, which to the plainsman meant safety or danger, life or death, but which would mean to such a man, indeed, no more than so many blades of grass. This silent excitement of the solitary ride over the broad prairie, where the city man would see nothing but dull monotony, was something more excitingly fierce than anything I had seen in a town, and I had seen Wall Street crazed. I have watched street riots, I have witnessed royal pageants, and I have seen men lynched. These things stir the blood, but they all seem pale to what I have felt when out alone on a scout.

Consequently the scout on duty was compelled to invent ruses of his own to assist him in emergency. And when some extremely dangerous mission had to be undertaken the scout often puzzled the commander by refusing aid in the shape of a squad or any chosen number of soldiers to accompany him. But actually it was the part of discretion to do so, as going alone or with one or two chosen comrades whom you knew to be true blue was a precaution that favored your own safety, as every scout naturally picked the very best mounts and rode one and had what is called a "lead horse," well trained, to follow and stand by him in every emergency. He had only himself to look out for, and with a good lead horse in a race for life had a fresh remount. Therefore I always kept myself well provided with well trained steeds, who became wonderfully proficient in scenting danger and even game. The fact that your horses were unshod was another puzzle to a trailing Indian, as a shod horse print gave him a clue to a white man's presence or the proximity of the military. One of my ruses was to take with me a bugler of the Fifth cavalry named Kershaw, who developed a capacity for comradeship in such adventures. Kershaw, after retiring from the army, became chief of police at Chester, Pa., near Philadelphia, and died there several years ago. Generally I preferred, like others, going alone, as then I had only myself to look out for.

I took Kershaw with me often, as I knew the country was infested with

The bugle call threw them into confusion. large bands of Indians, when it was too dangerous to travel in daytime and your object could be best accomplished in the night. His value as "a striker" can be best explained by the following incident: On one occasion we slept during the day in a well wooded box canyon, near a little stream of water, with plenty of grass for the horses to browse on, and at the same time we were hidden from view. Toward evening, when we thought it convenient to continue our scout, just as we were about to emerge from our hiding place a large band of Indians assembled down the canyon to camp for the night. Mounted as they were, it was useless for us to attempt flight, so, moving farther backward in the woods, we remained concealed until they had settled down. There was no way to get out except a dash through the Indian village. We dared not stay till daylight, as they would have seen us and we quietly waited for night to come. When we moved out we went to the edge of the village, where there was an avenue of escape. Their faithful dogs, of course, alarmed the camp, so the best we could do was to make a dash out, wheel and fire as quick as we could, and Kershaw with his faithful bugle blew the charge. Riding quickly around the village, we made another little firing at them and sounded the bugle charge again. A repetition of this at another point and a bugle charge threw them into confusion, stampeded their ponies, prevented their quick mounting, and while they went in one direction bold Kershaw and myself were riding in another. Naturally, of course, this gave the Indians something to think of in the night while we got to the post and informed Colonel Royal of the location and, with Major Brown, Captain Bache, Lieutenant Jack Hayes and a detachment of cavalry, went on the trail, which was followed for two days, and the Indians were severely punished, with but few casualties on our side.

Getting fresh meat for Fort Sheridan, we were greatly annoyed at times on our buffalo hunt by being jumped by the Indians, who in those days were generally out with the same object. Many a hot skirmish or many a run for it was necessary. Buffalo naturally were some distance from the fort, and I thought of a trick by which I could give my red brothers a surprise. In a run for it a few miles from the fort was a hogback that furnished a good defensive position, and I had often noticed that it had a long, deep, bushy ravine. It was in the nature almost of a natural fortification. So I thought how I could get them to repeat their many attacks on me when I ran to this particular point, from which I could signal for help to the fort with hasty grass fires and "smoke that talked." Buffaloes were at the time plentiful, so I secured Kershaw and about fifteen good marksmen, with provisions for the trip, and started out before daylight for the hunt. Hiding the soldiers in this ravine, we proceeded on our journey and had not the wagons half filled before my striker, Bill White, announced Indians in the distance, "and a big band, too," said Bill. Away we went for the hogback, and it was licker split, with the Indians gaining on us every minute. We reached it, threw our wagons into position, packed our buffalo hams out for breakfast, threw some straw about and gathered up some dead grass to make a signal. The Indians, seeing it, knew that relief would come and they hadn't a moment to lose if they wanted our scalps. On they came, dashing around. Myself and teamsters and five or six of us hanging away at them, they circled around and drew off, as they commonly did, and at a distance of about seventy-five yards from the ambush. As usual, they bunched together, listening to the wrangle of the chief. Bang! Bang! Bang! And the old Winchester began to talk from the ravine, while Kershaw with his bugle blew the charge, the Indians tumbling here, there and everywhere out of their saddles, the rest scattering with the speed of jack rabbits in all directions. Assembling on the distant hills, they realized that the jig was up, particularly when they saw the cavalry coming in the distance. Somehow or other during the remainder of the season they never seemed to molest the butcher wagon with the same appetite. And the fort always had fresh meat.

A country of such vast expanse, unsettled save for a few forts as places of refuge and succor so comparatively few in number as to be, as it were, like pebbles on the seashore, rendered the campaign in winter, with the blizzard conditions, not only hazardous and dangerous, but even if successfully combated attended by excruciating suffering. This the old army officers and soldiers of the early campaigns will never forget, the physical discomforts and mental worrying with climatic conditions far exceeding those that defeated Napoleon in his winter campaign in the region about Moscow.

I relate two or three examples. On one occasion I was out with some of the Fifth cavalry under the command of Lieutenant Bache, a descendant of Benjamin Franklin and a member of a well known Philadelphia family and, by the way, a magnificent young officer, who in various campaigns showed a bravery and dash that one would not associate with his aristocratic bearing and extreme gentility. A blizzard arose. Fortunately we were near shelter in the shape of some bluffs and scattered wood. When the blizzard was over it was necessary for us to strike out on the path of duty. The thermometer was away below zero and the wind cutting and sharp.

On coming back from the lead to consult with Lieutenant Bache I passed by him to caution the sergeants to look out for their men from the cold and see that they did not become drowsy, and on my return I found indications of numbness and drowsiness even in the case of the lieutenant. I aroused him and appealed to him to pull himself together, but he was just in the humor to resent it. In consequence I had to take the law into my own hands and shake him up in lively style, first taking the precaution of slipping his revolver and placing it out of his reach. As he did not respond to my efforts on the horse, I simply dismounted, pulled him from the horse and used him in what one would think a rather rude and rough manner. In fact, I had to make a punch bag and foot-ball out of him, much to the astonishment of some of the young troopers, who came up and were going to avenge my apparent discourtesy to their officer, though some of the older men explained its necessity. Eventually I got the lieutenant on his feet, and while our horses were being taken care of an old sergeant and myself hustled him along on a little foot race until we got his blood in circulation, and so, overcoming the danger, we eventually arrived safely at the fort.

On another occasion when out with General Eugene A. Carr, with whom I consulted and who, by the way, was one of the best posted and equipped Indian fighters and frontiersmen on the roster of the army, we both concluded that on account of the peculiar balmy condition of the weather a blizzard would be the next thing in order. So we resolved to strike camp early, as we were then in a bleak country and over fifty miles from wood and water. This wood and water were in a lower country, where there was only one gap which would furnish descent into the valley, and that had to be reached by careful attention to direction.

Starting early and getting the point of the wind, we had not gone far before old Boreas began his revels. General Carr, of course, gave orders to the commanding officers of companies in regard to preventing drowsiness of the men and to quit them in case of any of them succumbing to the cold. I shall long remember that trip, for it was necessary for me to go by the wind and not flinch from it, for in the blinding blizzard we would all soon be lost. The direction brought the wind against my left ear, and, as the storm soon became so blinding that even a black horse could not be seen ten feet from the picket ropes, lariat lines were scattered along to guide the men, who kept so close almost as to touch each horse's tail. But I dared not change my position for fear of losing the direction, so for eight hours I held my left cheek and ear against the storm and, of course, suffered greatly from frostbite. I dared not dismount, as did many of the others, General Carr himself walking nearly all the distance, leading his horse. I had stuffed my ear with a piece of saddle blanket, but notwithstanding that the eardrums were frozen, and for a time it gave me intense pain and suffering, and up to the present day it has quite affected my hearing on that side. But by this pertinacity we reached the gap, and when I had made the point successfully and the descent down into the canyon became assured there were never 1,500 men who let out such yells and peans of joy.

On another occasion I had a very trying experience when General Penrose's command had been sent to reconnoiter the surrounding country by General Sheridan and were known to have been somewhere in a blizzard. Not hearing from them for several days, we knew they were up against it, but as all trails were covered and obliterated by the drifting snow it was a serious problem to find them. General Carr, of course, consulted with me in the matter, and he relates the incident in detail in "Carr's Campaigns" of my success in finding the men. In this instance, knowing in what direction they had gone, I had to travel fifteen miles to find a ridge that they would cross and that the storm would blow the snow away from and leave bare. Following this ridge for five miles or more, I found the trail of their horses and wagons where they had crossed and by the hoof tracks located the direction in which they had gone. I succeeded in reaching them, snowed in and in a terrible condition, for everything had been eaten up to such an extent that the horses and mules had eaten the manes and tails off each other. Returning the next day, relief was sent, and the commands became reunited.
